

ELIZABETH NGARE PROFILE

Elizabeth Ngare is a passionate performing artist, educator, and advocate for inclusive education who has dedicated her career to transforming the lives of visually impaired students through music, technology, and empowerment.

As the long-serving principal of Likoni School for the Visually Impaired, she has led her students to excel in district, provincial, and national music competitions—often placing first—and even performing for the President of Kenya.

Highlights of her achievements include:

- School Choir Leadership: Directed the school choir to numerous victories, boosting students' confidence and showcasing their talents on both local and international stages.
- International Representation: Participated in the SAMBHAV International Festival for Persons with Disabilities in New Delhi, India, and represented Kenya at the "Let's Tell the World About Us" International Workshop for Persons with Disabilities in Sanya City, China.
- National Recognition: Received prestigious national awards for her outstanding contribution to the lives of her students through music.
- Cultural Exchange: Led students on international performance tours, providing life-changing opportunities for cultural exchange and personal growth.
- Empowerment through Music: Used music as a tool to build confidence, self-expression, and ambition among learners with disabilities.

Beyond music, Elizabeth is a curriculum designer for Special Needs Education at the Kenya Institute of Curriculum Development, shaping national education programs to be more inclusive. She has also championed the integration of technology in special education, spearheading the establishment of computer labs at her school to equip students with essential digital skills.

Her leadership extends to the National Executive Committee of the Kenya Music Festivals, where she oversees Special Needs Education categories, and to AIDO International, where she serves as Queen Mother and Cultural Officer.

Elizabeth's dedication blends artistry, education, and advocacy—making her a beacon of inspiration for educators, learners, and communities across Kenya and beyond.
